

TITLE:

The significance of nongovernmental organizations in human life with multiple sclerosis

AUTHOR:

Martina Benešová

DEPARTMENT:

Department of Special Education

SUPERVISOR:

PhDr. Monika Mužáková Ph.D.

SUMMARY:

This bachelor thesis deals with people with multiple sclerosis and services that these people can largely improve the quality of life. Multiple sclerosis is a disease that affects mostly young people and is therefore very possibly feared disease.

The major objective of this thesis is to determine the role played by non-governmental organizations in the lives of human with multiple sclerosis, the extent of this possibility using the services and patients know whether they do so.

The work is divided into two parts, theoretical and empirical. The theoretical part deals with the problems in terms of its history, causes, symptoms and course of different types of disease. There are, two organizations that follow up with the problem of multiple sclerosis. There is also outlined what is their activity that may influence on satisfying the needs of people with multiple sclerosis is part of the empirical survey, which was found to what extent the quality of life of people with multiple sclerosis and non-governmental organization responded to questions associated with it. The questionnaire was filled in by one hundred respondents who were exclusively members of Roska, so while patients with MS.

KEYWORDS:

Multiple sclerosis (MS), human, life, quality, patient.